

Did your GP make a difference?

GPs have chosen to train for around one decade to become specialists in general practice.

From supporting you through illness or diagnosis, to helping you navigate life's challenges, your GP may have played an important role in your health journey.

The Royal Australian College of General Practitioners (RACGP) represents GPs across Australia. We're inviting patients to share the impact GP care has had on their lives.

Your story can too.

Your health story matters.
By sharing it, you'll help:

- ✓ highlight the impact GPs have on communities
- ✓ raise awareness of the value of a relationship with a GP
- ✓ inspire other doctors to train to be GPs
- ✓ strengthen the future of healthcare in Australia.

Share your story today.

Selected stories may be featured in RACGP online content, exhibitions, media activities and campaigns. We'll obtain your permission before any public use.

RACGP
Royal Australian College of General Practitioners