RACGP General Practice Workforce 2026

Active in training*

AGPT registrars	4,341
Rural generalist registrars	537
FSP registrars	1,540
PEP-SP participants	523
Total RACGP GPs in training	6,941

Registrar placement distribution

Training Capacity

Total community sites†	2,964
Total supervisors	7,039

RACGP AGPT, FSP and PEP Specialist program data retrieved 10.08.26

*National headcount reflects the total unique number of RACGP GPs in training, some registrars may work across multiple jurisdictions/MM categories

General includes registrars on Composite Pathway

†Community sites include RACGP accredited General Practices, AMS/ACCHOs, and Speciality Practices

‡RACGP Members include Fellows, GPs in training, Students and other members. RACGP members practising in General Practice is based on their principal place of practice as at 22.09.26

ID-10001

AGPT demographics

Pathway

61% GENERAL | 39% RURAL

Gender

Male 1890 (39%)

Female 2972 (61%)

Non-binary 9 (0.2%)

N/S 7 (0.1%)

Initial medical qualification

71% AMG | 29% IMG

Membership

RACGP members‡ 55,332

	RACGP Members practising in General Practice	RACGP membership contribution to the overall practising GP workforce
Australia	34,874	80%
MM1	22,617	79%
MM2–7	12,257	84%

4 in 5 GPs in Australia are RACGP members, reflecting the College's central role in supporting and strengthening the nation's general practice workforce.

Nearly 7,000 doctors are currently training through RACGP programs, creating a strong pipeline of future GPs.

Since college-led training commenced (2023):

- ✓ General practice is growing, with AGPT accepted places increasing by 57% and FSP participation by 39%.
- ✓ Rural pathways are leading workforce growth, with 70% growth in MM2-7 training pathways, strengthening future access to care in regional and rural communities.

RACGP is shaping the future of general practice, supporting the workforce from training through to lifelong professional practice to keep Australia healthy.

RACGP
Royal Australian College of General Practitioners