National guide to a preventive health assessment for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people (Third edition)

If you are a GP, Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander health practitioner/worker, practice nurse or a practice manager; come along to this half day workshop to learn about maximising the opportunity for the prevention of disease at each health service visit.

In this interactive half day workshop a National Guide author along with a skilled continuous quality improvement practitioner will discuss how best to utilise the third edition of the National Guide when providing care for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

The workshop will be practical and highly interactive, consisting of case studies and small group learning activities.

Program

- Background and purpose of the National Guide
- Features of the National Guide, including:
 - Recommendation tables
 - Good practice points
 - Evidence base
 - Lifecycle wall chart
- Putting the National Guide into practice

This program is a joint partnership between The Royal Australian College of General Practitioners (RACGP) and National Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Organisation (NACCHO). This program is funded by the Australian Government Department of Health.
