

General practices play a fundamental role in ensuring the privacy of a patient's personal information, and must comply with privacy legislation to ensure sensitive clinical and business information remains protected.

Privacy legislation and Australian Privacy Principles (APPs)

It is essential to familiarise yourself with the all of the APPs. The three listed below have undergone significant changes and/or are new to the Privacy Act 1988:

APPs 8 and 11 – Cross border disclosure of personal information

APP 5 – Third parties accessing information

APP 7 – Using data for direct marketing purposes

For information in undertaking a periodic, structured risk assessments of your computer and information security, refer to the RACGP's Information security in general practice, section 2.1 at <https://www.racgp.org.au/running-a-practice/security/protecting-your-practice-information/information-security-in-general-practice>

For a review of the current privacy legislative framework, including the APPs and the various health records acts, refer to the RACGP's Privacy and managing health information in general practice resource at <https://www.racgp.org.au/running-a-practice/security/protecting-your-practice-information/privacy>

The RACGP has provided new and revised resources to ensure general practices are not exposed to breaches of privacy and feel comfortable navigating the APP principles. For access to the patient privacy policy templates, refer to the RACGP website at <https://www.racgp.org.au/running-a-practice/security/protecting-your-practice-information/privacy>

Research requirements and de-identified (secondary use of) data

For a strategy framework, principles papers and more information around managing the use of your data for secondary purposes, refer to the RACGP's Secondary use of general practice data resource at <https://www.racgp.org.au/running-a-practice/security/managing-practice-information/secondary-use-of-general-practice-data>

Privacy requirements in general practice checklist

Date of completion

Name of practice

Our general practice is committed to ensuring the privacy of patients' personal information. We are aware that we must comply with privacy legislation to ensure sensitive clinical and business information remains protected, including:

Privacy legislation and Australian Privacy Principles (APPs)

APPs 8 and 11 – cross border disclosure of personal information

APP 5 – third parties accessing information

APP 7 – using data for direct marketing purposes

Research requirements and de-identified (secondary use of) data

Notes

The information set out in this publication is current at the date of first publication and is intended for use as a guide of a general nature only and may or may not be relevant to particular patients or circumstances. The RACGP and its employees and agents have no liability (including for negligence) to any users of the information contained in this publication.

© The Royal Australian College of General Practitioners 2019

This resource is provided under licence by the RACGP. Full terms are available at www.racgp.org.au/usage/licence

We acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of the lands and seas on which we work and live, and pay our respects to Elders, past, present and future.